INPURSUIT HEALTH, LLC

Class C Units · What They Provide

Plain-language overview · 260803.1

This is a plain summary of what a Class C investor receives. It is qualified by the Operating Agreement, as amended by the Class C Unit Designation, and the Subscription Agreement, which control.

The offering

- Security: Class C non-voting economic membership units in InPursuit Health, LLC, a Wyoming limited liability company.
- Size: $3,500,000, with the Board authorized to accept oversubscriptions up to $5,000,000 at identical terms.
- Valuation: $20,000,000 pre-money.
- Minimum: $25,000 per investor.
- Close: single close. Funded by wire, executed by DocuSign.

What you get

- Economic ownership. A Class C Unit is a real economic stake in the Company. You participate in the Company's economic upside as a member, and the Class C Units rank senior to the Class C-1 advisory units.
- A membership position. On closing you are admitted as a member of the Company and hold your units under the Operating Agreement.
- Your percentage is protected from the advisor pool. The Company maintains a 5% advisory pool (Class C-1), but it sits inside the pre-money, so the existing members bear that dilution and your negotiated percentage for your investment is not reduced by it.
- Information. Class C holders receive the information rights provided in the Operating Agreement.

What Class C does not include

- No voting or management rights. Class C is a passive economic interest. You do not vote on Company matters or participate in management, except for the narrow rights that cannot be waived under Wyoming law.
- No guaranteed distributions. The Company does not expect to distribute cash in the near term; cash is reinvested to grow the business.

Structure and tax

- LLC now, and intended to stay one. The Company is an LLC. As a member you receive an annual Schedule K-1 and are taxed on income allocated to you, which may occur without a matching cash distribution.
- Possible future reorganization. The founder may later elect to reorganize the Company into another structure. If that happens, your Class C Units exchange into the corresponding equity of the successor entity, preserving your economic position. There is no assurance it will occur.

Liquidity and risk

- Restricted and illiquid. The units are restricted securities with no public market. You should be prepared to hold indefinitely, and transfers are subject to the Operating Agreement.
- High risk. This is an early-stage investment and involves a high degree of risk, including the possible loss of the entire investment. The full risk factors are in the offering disclosures (Exhibit C), which you should read before subscribing.

To invest

Accredited investors receive the one-pager, the offering disclosures (Exhibit C), and the Subscription Agreement. You confirm accredited status, complete the Subscription Agreement for your investment amount, and wire funds on acceptance. Your unit count is confirmed at closing based on the per-unit price fixed for the offering.

This overview is informational only, is not an offer to sell or a solicitation to buy securities, and is qualified in its entirety by the definitive offering documents. The units are not registered under the Securities Act of 1933 or any state securities law and are offered only to accredited investors. Confidential.
